

November 2014

Det-Tronics Establishes New Office in Anchorage, Alaska

Providing Sales, Engineering and Services Support to Local Customer Base

We are pleased to announce our new sales office and engineering center in Anchorage, Alaska. The former Engineered Fire & Safety group has assumed the Det-Tronics name, and become one of our many global support centers.

The new office will serve as an extension of our factory and will be completely accessible to our Alaskan customer base and business partners. The office will deliver new capabilities including local fabrication of fire and gas detection system panels, factory acceptance testing of custom systems, local field service support, and industrial fire suppression systems support.

With a local presence and a strong team of experts who understand the needs of Alaska oil and gas customers, our Anchorage office is well-positioned to grow our business.

